Despachos de Guerra

Michael Herr

Despachos de Guerra Michael Herr

When Michael Herr went to Vietnam in 1967 as a correspondent for Esquire he was a virtually unknown writer. But he quickly became a celebrated author after the publication of his famous article Hellish tastes, and his reputation grew with the steady appearance of more of his works. War Dispatches confirmed what his first admirers had seen: no one has written, nor will probably ever write, such an eloquent vigorous and terrifying account of what it was like to fight (and survive) in that ghostly war. Many books have been written about Vietnam, but this book is unique: a timeless work of bravery that will remain among the best books ever written about men at war. This masterpiece of New Journalism won the International Press Award in 1978.
